Many people take out federal tax refunds the same time they file their state tax return. The tax benefit of using a federal income tax refund to pay off debt can be just as good as a state income tax refund.

All you need is a simple 4-step system. Before filing for a federal tax refund, you first determine the amount of the tax you would owe without getting a federal income tax refund. Second, you subtract the amount you would owe without a refund from the refund amount you are receiving. Third, you divide the amount of the federal income tax you will owe if you do not get a refund by the amount of your expected refund.
